---"For me … running away from the inevitability of a computer being smarter is not an option. It's unavoidable. The smart thing to do therefore is to run at it.

To think that perhaps the most significant event in history will happen during my lifetime is almost beyond my comprehension.

I've always known people smarter than me, so for me personally, a computer being smarter than me is easy to accept. And I love smart people. They make me smarter. So now I'll just surround myself with computers that are smarter than me as well. All kinds of problems I couldn't solve because of my limited intellectual capabilities become solvable."
