

---"Our environmental laws badly
need rethinking."

WILLIAM RUCKELSHAUS

FIRST ADMINISTRATOR OF THE EPA

A close-up photograph of Fred Krupp, a man with grey hair, wearing a dark pinstripe suit, a light blue shirt, and a patterned tie. He is looking slightly to his right and speaking into a black microphone with a red ring. The background is blurred, showing other people and a conference setting.

"[O]ur environmental laws are not achieving their important goals." —

Fred Krupp, Environmental Defense Fund

---“[We need] a more robust statutory framework to enable the country to achieve further environmental progress, which at the moment is stalled and needs to be rekindled.”

—William K. Reilly, Administrator, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, 1989-93

---“The Clean Air Act is not a relic to be displayed in the Smithsonian, but a living document that must be refurbished to continue realizing results. . . .[W]e have a responsibility to overhaul and enhance the Clean Air Act to ensure it translates from paper promises into cleaner air.”

---Stephen Johnson, Former EPA Administrator

---"The assumptions behind the 1970 scheme no longer hold true."

---"We ought to be able to go further, but we can't because the statute is stupid."

---"The time to celebrate will come when the Clean Air Act is itself reformed to make it capable of dealing with today's challenges."

David Schoenbrod

NEW YORK LAW SCHOOL

Trustee Professor of Law
Visiting Scholar, American Enterprise Institute

A man in a dark suit and tie, identified as Jeff Holmstead, is seated at a long wooden table during a public hearing. He is looking slightly to his left with a serious expression. In front of him is a white nameplate that reads "MR. HOLMSTEAD". Two clear plastic water bottles are on the table, one on each side of the nameplate. Behind him, two wooden chairs are visible, each with a black sign that says "RESERVED FOR WITNESSES". The background is slightly out of focus, showing other people seated at the table.

----“So my basic message this morning is I think the Clean Air Act that has served us pretty well for the last 40 years on ozone is going to have to be re-examined.”

—Jeff Holmstead, Bracewell & Giuliani, Former EPA Assistant Administrator for Air

A man in a dark suit and blue tie is speaking at a podium, gesturing with his right hand and holding a rolled-up document in his left. The background is dark and out of focus.

---"I think that there's merit in having Congress consider what would be the appropriate amendments to the Clean Air Act."---

Cal Dooley, president and CEO of the American Chemistry Council

"Congress needs
to determine the scope of the Clean Air Act . . ."

William Kovacs

Senior VP Environment, Technology, & Regulatory Affairs, U.S. Chamber of Commerce

“NAM supports reform of the Clean Air Act to improve the NAAQS review and establishment process.”

A photograph of Gary Marchant, a man with thinning brown hair, wearing a grey suit, white shirt, and a red tie with small white dots. He is speaking at a podium, gesturing with both hands. A microphone is in front of him. In the background, two other men in suits are standing and watching. The setting appears to be a formal event or conference.

"Environmental policy is in urgent need of new ideas to rejuvenate aging and gridlocked frameworks." —Gary Marchant, Arizona State University

MARCHANT

---“The heart of the Clean Air Act’s approach to conventional pollutants is a top-down command approach that was adopted thirty-eight years ago and is now obsolete. It is time to update the law on the basis of experience in order to improve health protection, save on costs, and prompt technological innovation,” ---Richard Stewart, NYU Professor, advisory trustee of the Environmental Defense Fund , and former EPA Assistant Attorney General

A photograph of James Gustave Speth, a man with glasses and a suit, speaking and gesturing with his hands raised. The background is dark and out of focus.

"The old environmental laws and approaches have run their course, and we urgently need an intensive period of environmental law reform. —

James Gustave Speth, Yale University, Author of Red Sky at Morning: America and the Crisis of the Global Environment

“The Clean Air Act needs modernization.” ---Seyed Sadredin,
San Joaquin Valley Air Pollution Control District

San Joaquin Valley
AIR POLLUTION CONTROL DISTRICT

A woman with blonde hair tied back, wearing glasses and a dark jacket, is speaking into a microphone. She is gesturing with her right hand. A clear plastic water bottle is visible in the foreground. The background shows a wooden panelled wall.

“The Clean Air Act (CAA), now 40 years old, is in serious need of reform on multiple levels.” —

Kathleen Hartnett White, Texas Public Policy Foundation and Former Chair of the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality

RAPCA

Regional Air Pollution Control Agency

---“Improvement is needed and can be accomplished only through simplification of the process within the CAA legislation.” ---Dayton County

Regional Air Pollution Control Agency

"Business as usual
isn't working
anymore." —J. B. Ruhl, Florida State University College of Law

---“It’s time to stop trying to fit a round peg into a square hole. [. . .] This much is clear: CAA reform must be a priority of the next Congress.” ---Nick Goldstein, ARTBA

Vice President of Regulatory Affairs

State of Texas

---"The nonalignment between responsibility and authority is a primary issue that needs to be considered in reform of the Clean Air Act." ---State of Texas

Congressional Testimony

---“There are, however, a number of fundamental design flaws and structural limitations in the original statutory scheme, its subsequent amendments, and its administration that have limited the CAA’s effectiveness in protecting public health, driven up compliance costs, and spawned political controversy and litigation.”---Robert Nordhaus, Van Ness Feldman LLP

---“[There is an] overwhelming case for Clean Air Act Reform.” ---William Pedersen, Perkins Coie, Former EPA Deputy General Counsel

---“The current Clean Air Act places all the responsibility on the states, but then deprives them of the needed authority through preemption provisions. This is not a fair situation.”

—South Coast Air Quality Management District

South Coast
AQMD

A middle-aged man with glasses and a mustache, wearing a brown suit jacket over a green and white checkered shirt and a dark tie, is speaking at a podium. He is gesturing with his right hand. The background is dark with a blue light source on the left.

---“Look, everybody talks about how wonderful a compromise the 1990 Clean Air Act amendments were [. . .]That's 25 years ago. I think [it's] probably time to take a harder look at how some of the programs that date back to the 1990s have been interpreted.”—Scott Segal , Bracewell & Giuliani , Electric Reliability Coordinating Council

Council